Woodlys Make It to the Nuremberg Toy Museum!

We're building a little world of big imagination.

WoodlyWoo is a set of abstract wooden figures, a sustainable toy that inspires open-ended play, curiosity and storytelling. It started with a simple question: How little does a toy need to tell a child, while still leaving room for imagination?

Invented and designed by Vijaya Madhuri, Woodlys began as a toy design project during her time at the National Institute of Design (NID), Ahmedabad. The figures are simple and abstract, with very little detail. They do not have fixed expressions, costumes or characters, so children can imagine them as whoever they want them to be. Their meaning comes through play.

Over the years, Woodlys have developed through design exploration, play testing and research. They were awarded Highly Commended in the Creative Play Awards 2025, judged by readers of Creative Steps magazine.

Research around Woodlys has looked at how children understand and use abstract forms during pretend and symbolic play. And now, Woodlys have found a new home at the Spielzeugmuseum Nürnberg (Nuremberg Toy Museum). A set has been accepted for display, while playsets are available for sale through the museum shop.

From an NID design project to research, international conversations, recognition from Creative Steps, and now a place in the Nuremberg Toy Museum, Woodlys continues to grow – with many more stories still waiting to be imagined by children.
